To:	Anna
From:	Vishvjeet
Subject:	M&A Strategy: Acquisition Target Recommendation for Worldwide Brewing

Hi Anna,

Further to our discussion regarding Worldwide Brewing's strategic priorities in Asia, please find attached a detailed briefing on several potential acquisition targets.
The analysis for each candidate evaluates key metrics, strategic fit, synergies, and risks, concluding with a priority recommendation.
I look forward to discussing these options with you and the team to determine the most compelling path forward.

Company	Description	Relevance to WorldWide Brewing	Recommendation
HappyHour Co.	HappyHour Co. is the largest player in Singapore and Malaysia, in the segments of beer, spirits and non-alcoholic beverages. Its operations include manufacturing facilities, distribution and direct sales and it has demonstrated strong growth in EBITDA in FY2020 which was up 20% pcp and amounted to US$300mm.	It has similar operations to WorldWide Brewing across the same segments and is the leading player in Singapore and Malaysia, suggesting the potential for strategic benefits and synergies. It has solid financial results and an ownership structure that is owned by 3 families, rendering a potential acquisition relatively simple and feasible. HappyHour Co. would be appropriate to share.	Recommend
Spirit Bay	Spirit Bay is a leading Indonesian beverage company, holding the #1 market position in its home country and #2 in Singapore and Malaysia. The integrated company, with manufacturing based in Indonesia, also operates in China. It reported a robust EBITDA of US$400 million, reflecting a significant 40% year-over-year increase.	Spirit Bay should be prioritized as the primary target for acquisition discussions. Its profile aligns perfectly with WWB's strategic objectives of acquiring scale, growth, and a direct channel to the Asian consumer. They are 60% owned by a Global Sponsor, and have been undergoing aggressive cost cutting measures to improve their earnings.	Highly Recommend
Hipsters' Ale	Hipsters' Ale is a Malaysian-based, fully integrated beer and spirits company with operations across several Asian countries, including Singapore, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, and Cambodia. The company reported an EBITDA of US$200 million for FY2020, representing a 15% growth from the previous year.	Hipsters' Ale is a niche player that offers valuable geographic options but lacks the scale and market leadership to be the cornerstone of Worldwide Brewing's Asian strategy. Its primary relevance is as a strategic add-on, not a main course. The company is owned by 30 independent breweries	Recommend
Brew Co	Brew Co is a Malaysian market leader focused	Brew Co is a powerful chess piece, but it is not the complete	Recommend exclusively on alcohol manufacturing, holding the #1 position in that segment. Unlike its integrated competitors, it only operates manufacturing facilities and does not handle its own distribution or sales. Despite a slight 5% year-over-year decline, the company reported a substantial EBITDA of US$800 million for FY2020.	game. Its relevance depends entirely on Worldwide Brewing's willingness to execute a more complex and operational-heavy strategy to unlock its inherent value. The simpler, more direct path to growth would be acquiring an integrated player like Spirit Bay.

Bevy's Direct	Bevy's Direct is a Singapore-based wholesale distributor of beers, spirits, and non-alcoholic beverages operating across a wide range of Asia-Pacific markets. Unlike integrated competitors, it focuses solely on distribution and is owned by a wholefoods retailer. The company reported strong performance with FY2020 EBITDA of US$250 million, a 20% increase from the prior year.	Bevy's Direct is a force multiplier, not a foundation. On its own, it is misaligned with WWB's goals. As part of a larger, visionary M&A strategy, it could be the key to achieving unparalleled regional dominance. Its relevance is entirely conditional on another acquisition.	Least Recommend

Vishvjeet